

SmartStor controller wins

Certificate of Merit

The annual Innovation Awards at LAMMA took into consideration numerous exciting product launches which were finally shortlisted down. After further judging, the Awards Ceremony took place with Crop Systems achieving “Certificate of Merit in Best Product or Innovation in Technology” for their SmartStor controller. Launched last November, the controller offers complete communication with your storage facility, enabling the store manager to monitor anywhere, anytime, via smartphone, tablet, computer or phone. It is fully compatible with any make of existing equipment, incorporating power usage recording and can work ahead to take advantage of low peak energy savings and outside temperatures.

“SmartStor demonstrates a considerable advance in technology – it really does what it says on the tin – being a “potato store in your pocket”; added to that its vast safety features set it apart from anything we’ve done in the past” says Ray Andrews of Crop Systems.

“We are thrilled to have been awarded the Certificate of Merit by Lamma; especially with the record number of entries this year. Recognition encourages continued dedication in developing control systems for the future.
