

Supporting British farmers with British solutions

Proud sponsors of the SBCSR Storage Day 2012

SBCSR are the only “go to” for information on tried and tested practices in the potato storage industry today, with years of hard work and determination in proving theories through rigorous research and development.

We are proud to be sponsoring today’s storage event and to be working with the SBCSR to support the British potato storage industry.

The UK fundamentals of potato storage won’t ever change; but we have ever changing solutions for challenging times in the storage industry today.

The Potato Council has always realised we need new approaches and tools to help our British growers reduce waste and increase profitability, turning these into tangible financial outcomes.

Their never ceasing commitment to British growers has led to exciting developments that have become today's industry standard and are the backbone of correct potato storage.

We have a proven track record collaborating with Sutton Bridge Crop Storage Research on research and development projects and being their chosen supplier.

These years of research, both in house and with SBCSR, has helped us become the most innovative company in our sector.

Investing in British companies is so important to us that we endeavour to source the majority of our products from the UK.

We are proud to support British farmers today and in the future.

Back us and we will back you.
